

The consumer has enjoyed broad rights to "time-shift" broadcast programming for personal use in the present environment. While I understand the networks' concern over potential piracy, it would be far more reasonable to prosecute those few copyright abusers than to restrict the vast majority of law-abiding consumers from enjoying the same freedom of personal copying they have at present. Thank you.